FIFTY BRIDES OF THE OFFICERS OF THE FLEET

HAVE NOT SEEN THEIR HUSBANDS SINCE THE BATTLESHIPS STEAMED OUT OF HAMPTON ROADS—MRS. EVANS THE FIRST LADY OF THE FLEET—DAUGHTER OF "FIGHTING BOB" TAKES RANK AS WIFE OF COMMANDER.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—A mother always says "Home is where the heart is," an actress, "Home is where the trunk is," while the wife of a navy man cheerfully asserts, "Home is where my husband is."

Thus has San Francisco become the new home of many hundreds of women in the past forty-eight hours. Many women traveled without stopping clear across the continent, from the furthestmost ends of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Maine, to find a home in San Francisco for two or three weeks; and they'll pack up their trunks and lace and children at the end of that time and scout off to Japan or Tahiti, or South Africa, or Australia, or any other place to which their central star may be headed, and make a home there.

For wherever a navy man's boat sails, his wife follows on shore—or gets there first, most likely to give him a "welcome home" when his first touch land. He always knows she will be there, and he always knows his children will come running to meet him, just the same as if he were in any other walk of life, and had just come home from work.

Only sometimes the working hours get strung out into months, and sometimes they measure years, but not often; and when they do a navy man's wife has no home at all but the ocean.

One child who arrived at the Fairmont Tuesday has learned to talk and walk since her father last saw her, and although he was among the chiefs in the celebration yesterday, the sweetest music and the most beautiful sight of the day to him was when his baby ran out to meet him, and lisped "Papa!"

The fleet girl is Ruth, daughter of Harry E. Yarnell, chief engineer of Rear-Admiral Evans' flagship, who traveled many thousands of miles with her mother just for the happy home days here in San Francisco.

While the little baby's mother brought trunk after trunk of the fluffiest frocks, and laciest negligees, and most bewildering collection of Paris gown and bonnets, and didn't do a thing all day Tuesday after she arrived but shake out the dainties and admire them, and select the one that her husband should see first, when every garment required weeks in construction, just for the admiration of one mere man. And the baby's mother said she had brought a different gown for every ball, and reception—but bless her dear heart! there are not enough balls and receptions on the entertainment programme to accommodate the gowns!

FIRST LADY OF FLEET.

Mrs. "Fighting Bob" Evans is the first lady in the fleet, according to precedent, for when it comes to public entertainment, the wives of the officials rank in greatness according to the positions of their husbands.

the same as do the wives of the national officials and diplomatic corps in Washington.

The first lady of the fleet is much worn out with travel and has rested as much as possible since arriving "home" in San Francisco; she expressed herself as delighted with the welcome of San Francisco to the great white fleet, and admired the decorations and enthusiasm throughout the entire city. She is a silver-haired, sweet-faced woman, of the type that is spoken of as "noble" in times of war, but in times of peace we change "noble" to "beautiful," or "intellectual"—or both.

DAUGHTER OF ADMIRAL EVANS.

Mrs. C. C. Marsh, the daughter of Rear-Admiral Evans, at public functions does not take rank as the daughter of one of the greatest naval men of the Nation, but as the wife of a naval commander. Mrs. Marsh is here merely on a visit, as her "home" at present is in Washington, where her husband is stationed. Mrs. Marsh is with her mother at the St. Francis Hotel. She is a bright, dark-eyed little woman, whose eyes sparkle when she talks, while her whole face seems to sparkle with each passing thought. She dresses in the height of elegance, but that sort of elegance that wears dark tones and tailored effects, and splendid rich furs.

"This 'cast' and 'rank' of the service is a terrible thing to outsiders, but it is never observed outside of public functions," she said. "We women never think of it, unless we are entering the White House, or on some such occasion as this. Then we are careful to stand and sit and talk, and even think just within the narrow line of our husband's rank."

"When women of the service are together it is age or graciousness that counts as 'rank,' Mrs. Marsh explained with a graciousness that places her in the front rank of the royalty of the service."

FIFTY BRIDES ARRIVE.

Fifty young ladies who belong to those who belong to the fleet are carrying fifty secrets in their hearts, and they will not pick orange blossoms or even so much as glance at rice pudding for fear the secrets will be discovered.

There! It's out.

There are fifty brides among the visitors.

All of the fifty were married just before the fleet sailed from Hampton Roads in December, and many of the brides have not seen their husbands since—until yesterday.

Little Mrs. J. W. Oman, wife of the Lieutenant-Commander of the Rhode Island, said she did not know a thing about brides, and blushed up to the roots of her fluffy hair when she lingered with such loving newness over the word "husband" that she was recognized as one. She came clear across the continent to meet her husband in San Francisco, and blushed a sea-shell pink when she modestly said her experience with Navy life was limited to two days at Old Point.

"You see, when a man goes away on a two-year cruise," she explained, "he feels ever so much more contented if he is married to the girl he loves. You see, in case of sickness it is better; there is no trouble about a chaperon, and besides—besides—well, he's afraid she might marry some one else before he got back."

Evidently he isn't afraid of being divorced, and if all that the dear ladies of the fleet have to say about the Navy men is true it is small wonder they seldom figure in the divorce courts, and Uncle Sam shows his wisdom in keeping them shut up in little floating cages on the water, where Cupid's arrows have to fly short of the mark most of the time.

They are just the best, the truest, sweetest, darlings, oh, too-nice-for anything husbands in all the world, according to the ladies, some of whom philosophically admitted that they were with their husbands long enough to find out their mean traits—if they ever had any—while others confessed that a lifelong series of partings and reunions was preferable, in their extremes of joy and sorrow, to one long, monotonous, never-ending death repetition of seeing the same face at the breakfast table every morning in the year.

And every one of the dear ladies patriotically advised every girl in the country to marry a naval officer, never stopping to consider how many times a bigamist and over each official of the Navy would become if the girls acted on their advice.

WIFE OF ADMIRAL THOMAS.

"If a woman married in the service does not occupy one of the highest social positions in the Nation, or world, for that matter, it is her own fault," was the verdict of Mrs. Charles V. Thomas, who was born in the service as the daughter of Rear-Admiral Sampson; married in the service when she became the wife of Rear-Admiral Thomas, successor to Evans in command of the fleet, who has a brother and a son in the fleet now anchored in the bay, and a son-in-law besides, and is a great authority on what "marrying in the service" means.

"I have traveled all over the world as the wife of a United States naval officer, and the best and greatest society of every nation has entertained me as an officer's wife. An officer's wife is entertained at court in Europe and the Orient, and in her own country she is no less entertained."

"An officer's wife never has to worry about anything social. There is no place in society more secure than is hers. She knows if she is going to a place of amusement a vehicle will be waiting for her, sprung from somewhere, when she wishes to start. At every social function the wife of the sailor or soldier is treated the same as the titled nobility of Europe. All that is required of her is that she be a lady and remain so."

"Then there are the chances of seeing the world—not as mere visitors, but as persons really belonging in that part of the world, as a woman does when her husband is stationed in a foreign port. The wife has her own home, and though she may not occupy it for months or years at a time, it is still there for her to go to. Some ladies reside at the navy yards, and the wives and children of the navy men have little social centers all their own."

"And I say that any girl who has a chance to marry a naval man ought not to stop to consider, but just say 'Yes' as quickly as she can without appearing too anxious."

And as was said before, Mrs. Thomas knows.

Mrs. W. H. H. Southerland, wife of Captain Southerland, visited the Fairmont with her two daughters, Miss Southerland and Miss Mary, and all three of the ladies are proof of the happiness of the wives and children of navy men.

Though not one of the ladies even so much as whispered such a thing, it was in the atmosphere—that happiness among women depends much on having their own way, and what "Jackie Tar" can tell a woman what to do and hang around to see that she does it when Uncle Sam tells him to lift anchor and sail away!

Mrs. Southerland and her daughters told of the delightful winter they spent in California after bidding goodbye to the fleet at Hampton Roads, of the family reunion at San Diego and of the enjoyment of being in San Francisco; how they intend to take a trip to Honolulu when the fleet sails and meet Captain Southerland in October in Japan, the land of sunshine and flowers.

Two things have impressed themselves on the minds of Mrs. Southerland and her daughters—one the extreme patriotism of the West, the other

U. S. ATTORNEY
R. W. BRECKONS
IS ARRESTED

THEODORE RICHARDS INSISTS ON WARRANT INSTEAD OF PENAL SUMMONS—CHARGE IS WILFUL PRESENCE AT PRIZE FIGHT—JOCKEY WILLIS AND AH SAM ARRESTED FOR AFFRAY—H. M.
AYRES AND ASSISTANT ATTORNEY RAWLINS WITNESSES.

A warrant of arrest was sworn out against United States District Attorney Robert W. Breckons charging him with being wilfully present at a prize fight in the Orpheum theater on Saturday night last.

Assistant District Attorney William T. Rawlins is named in the warrant as a witness, along with H. M. Ayres, the promoter and manager of the boxing carnival at the Orpheum.

Theodore Richards swore to the warrant and it was issued by District Magistrate Frank Andrade.

Another warrant procured by Richards, the first one in fact, was for the arrest of Jockey Willis and Ah Sam, the pugilists who participated in the main event at the Orpheum on the night mentioned. They are charged with affray.

Rawlins and Ayres are again let off as mere witnesses in this case.

When Richards applied to Sheriff Iaukea for the warrant for Breckons he was remonstrated with by Iaukea, who suggested to him that a penal summons might be taken out instead of bringing so prominent a Federal official into court.

Richards however said he was responsible and wanted the matter to proceed in the way he had chosen.

Judge Andrade, while not liking the process either, followed his usual practice of not looking behind a sworn warrant. He signed the paper, it then became obligatory on the sheriff or any of his deputies, upon receipt of the warrant, to serve it with all due diligence.

Iaukea personally served the warrant on Breckons, being accompanied to the Judiciary building by Judge Andrade, and the defendant, at the instant of service, was released on his own recognizance.

Lyle A. Dickey was retained by Theodore Richards as attorney for the prosecution in the prize fight cases.

U. S. Attorney Breckons did not have much to say about the matter when seen after his arrest had taken place, but stated that he would acknowledge that he had been present at the alleged fight and would put up no defense. He said that he did not consider that he had been present at a "prize fight," but that he had seen five rounds of the boxing which took place.

While there is a warrant out for the arrest of Assistant U. S. District Attorney W. T. Rawlins, there was no arrest made on account of the fact that Rawlins was not in court this morning. He remained at his home on account of the death of the baby born in his family on Sunday.

As soon as the news spread around the Judiciary building that Breckons had been arrested there was much laughter. The jurymen and attorneys in the Koki case which Breckons is conducting in the Federal court, were all greatly interested and Attorney W. A. Kinney and Prosser, who are conducting Koki's defense, immediately tendered their services to the alleged culprit. Offers of bail were numerous on all sides and the sentiment that the affair was more ridiculous than anything else was to be heard everywhere.

It is possible that a nolle prosequi may be entered by the attorneys for the Territory in the case, which would effectually put an end to the matter. Otherwise the case will be interesting, for the burden of proof that the affair was a prize fight will fall on the prosecution's attorney, who will have the assistance of Lyle A. Dickey on the finer and more intricate points of law.

His long experience in many famous cases should according to one attorney "cause the defendants to tremble in their shoes."

It is understood that a very large number of subpoenas will be issued by the prosecution. Among those who were present and whom the prosecution may summon are: Jack Lucas, Walter F. Drake, A. V. Gear, Dr. E. Howard Humphris, Attorney P. E. Thompson, E. J. Lord, George Henshall, Charles Crane, J. W. W. Brewster, Col. Sam Johnson, C. W. C. Deering, W. C. Peacock, Jeremiah W. Doyle, B. Patrick O'Brien, J. Francis Doyle, Scotty Meeton, Fred Harrison, Senator C. F. Chillingworth, G. E. Metzger, E. W. Milverton, Frank Godfrey, Dr. J. T. Wayson, and very many others.

self, Acting Governor Mott-Smith, Judge Balou and many other prominent people were among the crowd on the wharf to see her off.

It's easier to be a college graduate than it is to earn a living.

yachts were in attendance, the Kamehameha giving her a brush out of the channel.

The tug Intrepid, bearing newspaper men, followed her out for several miles.

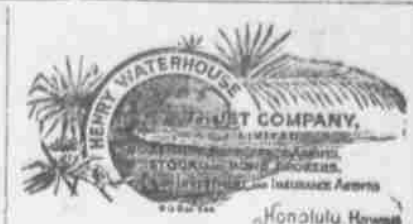

"We are going to win. We have it all cut out to win," said Captain Harris, just before departure. He expects to make San Pedro in about sixteen days and to be able to tell all about the yachts he passes on the way down when he returns.

No newspaper representative went. The candidates had dwindled to Al-bright of the Bulletin and, at the last moment, almost, he was not able to go on account of having to give up his position on the Bulletin if he should go.

There was much enthusiasm at the getaway and much pride shown in the beautiful schooner craft which is expected to go good an account of her—or the beautiful shops of San Francisco.

One of the most beautiful women in Army and Navy circles was also at the Fairmont, Mrs. K. G. Castleman, wife of Lieutenant Castleman, the sons of General Castleman, who is famed over the world for owning the finest string of Kentucky horses in the country for years. Before her marriage Mrs. Castleman was Miss Jessie Norton and one of the noted beauties of her State. Mrs. Castleman is tall and slender and moves with a quick grace. Her height is accentuated by her long, trailing gowns. Mrs. Castleman's hair is of a rich brown, with shades of burnished gold, done in a modernized Greek coil at the back of her small head. Her eyes are large and dark, her forehead low and broad and her smile both gentle and merry.

VERY HIGH TRIBUTE

The beauties of Hawaii made a great impression on Mr. Koch, the famous German bacteriologist, from a statement which he made to Acting Governor Mott-Smith just before leaving.

He said:

"If Hawaii was only nearer to Germany I would come out here every year. I never saw so beautiful a place."

The Alameda's cargo hence is approximately as follows: 11,000 bags of sugar, 1,000 bags of coffee and rice, 6-000 bunches of bananas, 1,000 cases of green pineapples, 500 cases of canned pineapples and the usual miscellany.
